Election/R strictions

1. The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

- I. Claims 1-26, drawn to an apparatus for detecting the thickness of layers of ground water, classified in class 73, subclass 152.18.
- II. Claim 27, drawn to an apparatus for detecting the thickness of layers of groundwater, classified in class 73, subclass 152.46.
- III. Claim 28, drawn to a sensor for measuring thickness of liquids, classified in class 73, subclass 152.01.
- IV. Claim 29, drawn to a sensor for measuring thickness of aqueous layers in a well, classified in class 73, subclass 152.02.

Inventions I and II are related as combination and subcombination.

Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because all of the limitations in invention II are not found in invention I. The subcombination has separate utility such as there is no mention of a data processor used in claim 27.

Inventions I and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because all of the limitations in invention III are not found in invention I. The subcombination has separate utility such as there is no mention of a strip as used in claim 28.

Inventions I and IV are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because all of the limitations in invention IV are not found in invention I. The subcombination has separate utility such as there is no mention of array switches used in claim 29.

Inventions II and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because all of the limitations in invention III are not found in invention II. The subcombination has separate utility such as there is no mention of a strip as used in claim 28.

Inventions II and IV are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because all of the limitations in invention IV are not found in invention II. The subcombination has separate utility such as there is no mention of array switches used in claim 29.

Inventions III and IV are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct from each other if they are shown to be separately usable. In the instant case, invention IV has separate utility such as liquid level measurement.

See MPEP § 806.05(d).
